

NRHC Roundtable Format

- A roundtable is different from a paper presentation. You will be sitting at your own roundtable with attendees who choose to attend your session, and you are acting as a moderator of your topic. This means that you will present your thoughts and ideas in a 10-minute presentation, but you will leave room for a 20-minute discussion afterwards (30 minutes total)
- The moderator of your session will give you signals after 30 minutes, which will give the attendees time to attend another table in your session (this also means that you will repeat your 10-minute presentation and begin a new 20-minute discussion)
- 15 minutes before the session ends, the moderator will ask for volunteers from each table to shortly present the findings of your discussion to the entire group

It is important that this is a discussion-based presentation; the main focus is to share ideas, not only to present your own. Feel free to bring handouts and activities for the people at your table during the interactive portion. Please be aware that there will be no AV available for roundtable presentations.
